Klan Is Taken to Task for Racial Attitude by Speaker At Missionary Convention

Organization Dangerous to Our Civilization, Society Official Declares.

PRESENTS SOME FACTS

Under its Own Brotherhood Made Victim of Hooded Band of Hate. Warned If Negroes Are Permitted to Sing They Will Quit.

The issue of the Ku Klux Klan was injected into the convention of the Western Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society in its closing hour Thursday night.

Miss J. Smith of Indianapolis, secretary of the board of temperance and social welfare of the Disciples of Christ (Christian Church), was the speaker. He lives in one of the strongholds of the Klan. Referring to the attitude of the Klan toward the negro race, citing an example in his state, Mr. Smith declared that the stirring up racial and religious prejudice "brings danger to our civilization."

Mr. Smith told a story of an incident that happened in Indiana in a Christian church of his home community within the last three weeks. After a well-known band of negro musicians had been engaged to sing at the church, the pastor was visited by a delegation of members of the church in robes and hoods and warned that if the negroes were permitted to sing they would withdraw from the church.

Concealing their identity under hoods while in conference with their pastor, they at the last were "not very brave," Mr. Smith said.

The speaker asserted that he referred to as prominent choice of membership and declared the organization as whole constituted a symptom of a condition that needs some attention.

Without reference to the Klan, Mr. Smith told a story of the racial feeling evident in Indiana. A negro physician of the city and his wife were in an automobile, when the doctor's wife's jaw was broken while an artery in his wrist was cut. Nineteen automobile parties passed the scene before the doctor could induce anyone to summon aid for himself and his wife.

Mr. Smith made a strong appeal in behalf of support of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States which will give Congress authority to enact laws regulating the employment of children of 18 years and younger in all the states.

Previous to the address of the evening there was a devotional period conducted by E. E. Massey of Oriskany, Pa. Following this, a missionary to Africa, who is home on a furlough, spoke briefly. The choir sang two numbers. The closing benediction was pronounced by Rev. Kyle Brooks of Greensburg. C. Ward Elcher of Greensburg presided.

With the eight session, which President J. C. Crawford declared to have been the greatest annual convention of the society he has attended, came to a close. Similar expressions were heard from several who have been attending the annual gatherings for many years.

All counted there were nearly 500 delegates and visitors. Some stayed through all the sessions. Others were here for a day.

One of the last acts of the convention was to adopt a resolution of protesting against the proclamation of the late Robert S. La Follette, for 25 years president of the society, and deploring his death last winter.

The convention went on record as opposed to the National Defense Day or "any other demonstration intended to glorify war." It expressed its approval of the "mobilization of the forces of peace on Armistice Day."

The services of Secretary D. Park Chapman of Greensburg, were recognized in a resolution adopted and the cooperation of the society pledged.

Rev. George Walker Buckner, pastor of the Connellsville church, was designated a member of the committee on nominations at the international convention which will be held at Cleveland October 11 to 20, following the national convention, to be held October 12 to 14, W. H. Hanna of Pittsburg and C. Ward Elcher of Greensburg were named as members of the committee on recommendations at the international gathering.

Greetings were received from the Women's Christian Temperance Union. A committee was designated to make reply to the proper officer, the union having adjourned its convention.

Dr. Royal J. Dye, the magnetic missionary, Herbert Smith, also an African missionary, was a furlough, and H. D. Smith of St. Louis were the speakers of the afternoon. H. R. Ford of Johnstown conducted the devotional period. The benediction was pronounced by M. L. Wadman of Tolt Marlen. Rev. Paul S. Wright of Scottsdale was the president.

FAYETTE BOOSTER ASSOCIATION TO MEET AT MOYER

The Fayette Boosters Association of the Ancient Order Knights of the Myrtle Chain will hold its monthly meeting on Saturday evening, September 20 at the hall of Monarch Castle at Moyer. Plans are being laid to make this the largest and best meeting ever held by this newly organized body. All castles in the county will be represented. Word has been received that large delegations from Pittsburg and other places will be present. Monarch Castle expects to have a hundred of its members out.

The general committee in charge of the entertainment has been working hard to make the entertainment well worth while for those who attend. The program includes several speakers. The Monarch Quartet, which is made up of members of the order, will sing a few selections. A one-act play will be given for the benefit of those who are in attendance. After the program lunch will be served.

Klan Issue Will Stand Out in New York State Fight

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The Ku Klux Klan will be one of the issues in the New York State campaign. With the hooded order claiming great strength on Long Island and in Western and Southern New York and being aided by aiding in the election of some county and state officers political leaders today admitted there is no way the issue can be avoided.

The Democratic platform undoubtedly will contain a denunciation of the organization in view of the condition that needs some attention. Without reference to the Klan, Mr. Smith told a story of the racial feeling evident in Indiana. A negro physician of the city and his wife were in an automobile, when the doctor's wife's jaw was broken while an artery in his wrist was cut. FOREIGNERS IN SHANGHAI SAFE; REVOLT TOTTERS

Government Troops Preparing to Finish General Lu's Then Manchur Threat.

EPIDEMIC ONLY FEAR

Possibility of Outbreak in Crowded City Creates Some Anxiety; Troops Landed to Defend Foreign Quarter Number 1,200, Including 400 Marines.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 19.—Foreigners in the settlement at Shanghai are safe and General Lu's revolt is tottering. The government troops are still holding out against government troops attacking the city.

The collapse of Lu's revolt is considered imminent however, and the Chi Li leaders already are planning to shift their forces northward against the Manchur threat at Shan Hai Kwan. The government considers the Chokiang revolt to be practically at an end, following the revolt at Hang Chow yesterday which sent General Lu scurrying to Shanghai with his family and bodyguard.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Americans and other foreigners in the foreign settlement at Shanghai are believed here to be in no danger, despite the expected capture of the city by Kiangfu troops today.

The international defense force, organized by the powers is reported by Consul General Cunningham to be wholly adequate to protect the settlement from being overrun by the retreating armies and refugees. The only anxiety felt is for a possible outbreak of an epidemic in the crowded native city which might spread to the foreign quarters with serious results.

More than 3,000 Americans, 5,000 Europeans and 15,000 Japanese make their homes in the foreign settlement. To protect this population the international powers have mobilized at the port 11 American cruisers and gunboats, four British ships, two Japanese, two French and one Italian. The troops landed to defend the foreign quarter number 1,200, including 400 American Marines and sailors.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pitt, of Roberts Hotel, near Elizabeth, reported that an unknown colored man, entered her home and snatched a fresh batch of bread and cookies from her table where she had placed them to cool. Monessen, Homestead, Turkey Hollow and Scottdale all reported sightings of the fugitive.

Court Order Issued for Destruction of Brewery

The first order of the kind issued by a court was handed down by Judge F. P. Schoenmaker in the United States Court at Erie yesterday, directing that the machinery used for the manufacture of beer in the plant of the Valley Brewing Company at Sutorville be junked and the remnants sold at public auction before October 7.

The order was issued upon petition of C. J. Simons, chief prohibition enforcement officer in Western Pennsylvania.

No Police Court. There was no police court this morning, no arrests being made over night. The suspect arrested in connection with the shooting of Chief of Police George Rao of West Newton by Constable Jerry Rittenor of Vanderbilt yesterday, who was lodged in the city jail, was taken to the Westmoreland county jail at Greensburg.

Rev. Hays at Summit. Rev. J. W. Hays of Dunbar will preach at the Summit Union Chapel Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Hays is a retired Baptist minister and was pastor of the Flatwoods church for a number of years. He has many friends in this community.

GENERAL DAWES INVADES SOUTH DAKOTA TONIGHT

ON BOARD THE HAWKEYE LIMTED, enroute to Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 19.—General George Dawes, Republican candidate for vice-president, crossed the Mississippi again today invading territory in South Dakota, considering one of the strongest centers of the "Independents."

The general speaks tonight at the farmers of the wheat belt. He is to be met by a delegation of Republicans at Rock Rapids, Ia., and will give an address at that place. He returns to Chicago immediately after his address this evening.

Dawes made two rear-platform appearances last night as his train passed through Lincoln. At Rockford he made a three-minute talk on the Constitution, reiterating his candidacy of Senator LaFollette. At Freeport, Dawes shook hands with admirers but refused to speak.

Two Hundred at Corn Road Held Near Vanderbilt

Mrs. E. J. Beatty and Mrs. Mary Richman were hostesses at a corn road held Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Conn, one mile south of Vanderbilt. Tables and seats were erected in the orchard and lights were strung from the main road. A fire was built under a large kettle which held about four bushels of roasting corn. It was filled twice as soon as the first kettle was done they were taken out and served from baskets, while grocers made of cheese cloth were passed out with each roasting ear. The menu consisted of corn, sandwiches, "hot dogs," pickles, cake, fruit and hot coffee. There were about two hundred present. All of Dickerson Run and Dawson.

J. E. Black was chief cook, assisted by E. J. Beatty, F. W. Black and Jacob Luckey. Anna Gooley and George Loveland carried off first honors by disposing of 14 ears of corn each; E. J. Beatty "corralled" the most waltzes; Kneat Collins and Jacob Luckey "hid" the sandwiches; G. W. Beatty and A. W. McClintock "dressed" the peas, and the guests looked on while the women "took the cake."

Hundreds Attend Funeral Service Of Police Chief

Hundreds of persons attended the funeral service for Chief of Police George Rao of West Newton, shot Tuesday morning by James Scott, a negro, which was held yesterday afternoon at the family home.

Although the heart interest of the community centered in the pathetic scenes about the casket of the dead officer, men of a vengeful turn of mind, took considerable pleasure in tramping out the negro labor camp, where, under rather mysterious circumstances, heavy charges of dynamite were touched off. It was considered an effort to frighten the imported negro labor out of the community.

Reports have been received from all directions concerning the appearance in this or that community, of a man answering Scott's description. Mrs. Elizabeth Pitt, of Roberts Hotel, near Elizabeth, reported that an unknown colored man, entered her home and snatched a fresh batch of bread and cookies from her table where she had placed them to cool. Monessen, Homestead, Turkey Hollow and Scottdale all reported sightings of the fugitive.

He delivered an address reviewing the work in his district during the year. He complimented the Connellsville club for what it had accomplished, particularly the work of the committee on crippled children, of which J. E. Angle is chairman.

State Police Use Poison As Most Effective "Lock"

LIGONIER, Pa., Sept. 19.—In their campaign against manufacturers of illegal beer, state police have resorted to the use of poison. Ten vats of beer in the Jannet Brewery at Boswell, near Harrisburg, were destroyed when troops raided the place and poured a solution of bichloride of mercury into each vat. Louis Abramson, vice-president of the brewing company, was arrested and turned over to federal authorities. Six other officials of the company are being sought on federal warrants.

The Jannet Brewery was raided several times previously but always resumed operations. State troops declared they believe poison will prove a more effective padlock on the beer in the vats than any legal process that could be devised. The raid and poisoning of the beer was made late yesterday by a squad of troops from Greensburg under Corporal Bunch.

LAFOLLETTE'S VOTE IN WISCONSIN WILL BE MUCH REDUCED

As Compared With Former Campaigns When He Was Running as a Republican.

REGULARS WILL STICK

To Coolidge Because of a Life-Long Habit in Voting the Ticket; Democratic Activity Will Help Republicans in Three-Cornered Fight

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 19.—Any one who simply crosses Wisconsin off the political map of doubtful states with the confident assertion that Senator LaFollette will get the electoral vote is missing much of what is happening in these parts.

For more or two factors which, when the ballots are counted, will tend to reduce the vote cast for Robert M. LaFollette in his home state. One is the Democratic party which mysteriously enough is displaying more activity than is customary and the other is the fact that under the Republican eagle where thousands of voters have marked their ballots traditionally they will no longer find LaFollette as of yore.

The senior Senator from Wisconsin has been running for office in this state for a generation. He has always been a Republican. In a previous vote two years ago was due to the fact that he won the Republican primaries and there were thousands of regular Republicans who disliked LaFollette but voted the straight Republican ticket. Also in those previous years there were thousands of Democrats and Socialists who helped LaFollette capture the machinery of the Republican party.

But today the voter faces a different situation. The regular Republican has Coolidge and Dawes. Many voters who are not so much disturbed about LaFollette's radicalism and who at the same time have the life-long habit of voting a Republican ticket, will vote for Coolidge.

Unquestionably Senator LaFollette will poll less of a Republican vote by a good deal than he did two years ago.

To offset his losses he hopes for some acquisitions as he will have Socialists and Democrats too. Indeed, it is difficult to conceive that there were many voters who failed to vote for LaFollette two years ago who would vote for him this year. He reached his maximum in 1922 and undoubtedly has lost some since then.

As in confirmation of this, these Democrats have taken on hope and behave as if they think they have a chance. For the first time in a long while they have nominated complete tickets throughout the counties and that is significant. Their strategy evidently is to hold the Democratic vote in line and to regain much of that has been in the habit of assisting LaFollette. The question is whether such tactics will help Davis or Coolidge. It surely doesn't help LaFollette and it cannot be of much aid to the Democratic national ticket by subtracting from LaFollette's vote the chances of President Coolidge carrying the state are improved. The Democrats have not been polling enough votes to assure them of anything but third place in a three-cornered race such as the presidential contest this year. If, therefore, they make an active campaign they will take away votes from LaFollette.

Privately, there are regular Republicans who are happy over what the Democrats are doing. The regulars are not well organized and they have division in their own ranks, but they have little alliance with the large independent body of voters which has been the main pillar of LaFollette's strength and if the Democrats can tempt them to vote the better for Coolidge prospects.

Wisconsin presents an unique situation. The Republican state machinery is in the hands of LaFollette. The Republican state convention has just fulfilled the promise of the LaFollette managers that they would play fair by leaving the Republican label to Coolidge and by seeing to it that the requirements of the statute were met in selecting electors who are really Coolidge men. For a time it was thought the LaFollette group might take advantage of the situation and confuse the issue by sticking to the Republican label. But as it is to make matters worse, the LaFollette managers have selected Coolidge electors and handed them to the regular Republican party—a humiliating situation in politics. The electors chosen are Coolidge men all right, but their very names on the ballot in some cases will only make some of the LaFollette voters, especially some of the Germans, somewhat irritable. Some of the names will make coolidgees in the otherwise might have been glossed over had the public been able to select their own electors.

RADIO CONTROL OF POWER SUBSTATION IN USE IN INDIANA

Operates Successfully at Distance of 25 Miles From Plant.

BETTER THAN TELEPHONE

The "Open Sesame," which All Baba used to open the den of the Forty Thieves is rivaled in the use of high frequency radio waves to control and operate from a distant point, a complete electrical station, located at Tipton, near Indianapolis, Ind., entirely without attendants, which supplies all the light and power requirements of a city of 10,000 people.

Through the special designing of a system of selector duplex carrier current telephone receiver already installed at the station, the feat which makes new electrical and radio history was accomplished.

John Ferguson, manager of operation of the Indiana Electric Corporation, co-operating with engineers of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company in designing the apparatus and it was installed under the supervision of Mr. Ferguson and C. A. Boddie, Westinghouse engineer, inventor of the automatic duplex carrier current receiver and transmitter.

The city of Tipton is served by the Northern Indiana Power Company's transmission lines connected to a large transforming substation located at the western city limits. In order to insure that the electrical supply will be without interruption, two transmission lines from different sources of power are used—the Kokomo and Noblesville power plants, respectively. If either of these transmission lines should become interrupted by reason of electrical storm, the supply can be retained immediately from the alternative source. Heretofore the operation of the oil switches to change over the source of supply has necessitated the constant presence of substation attendants, who have received their instructions for operating the switches by long distance telephone.

Telephone systems, however, are even more vulnerable than power lines to the action of the elements and power companies in the past have been unable sometimes to render continuous service during storms. The present substation at Tipton, the operation of which is governed entirely by high frequency waves is the result of their efforts and this new station marks a new era in electrical development.

The station adjoins the roadside on state road No. 10, west of Tipton. It is controlled by two massive oil circuit breakers of 75,000 volt, 400 ampere rating, and a rupturing capacity of one and one-half kilovolt amperes. These circuit-breakers are connected to the transmission lines, one from the north and the other from the south. If either of these lines develops any trouble, it is instantly observed on the power house instrument at Kokomo. In this event the Kokomo operator immediately sends out a series of high frequency waves which opens up the oil switch at Tipton connected to the defective line and closes the oil switch which is connected to the reserve line, the entire operation being completed in a few seconds.

The method by which this is accomplished is as follows: The operator at Kokomo dials a certain number on a telephone of special design similar to an automatic telephone. This telephone dial is connected to a radio transmitter and the action of dialing sends out a series of modulated radio impulses to the antenna at Kokomo. Upon receiving these impulses the antenna at Tipton station loads them down to a five-tube radio receiving set and amplifier, where they are multiplied in volume while still retaining their form characteristics. They are then carried to a series of selector relays, which in turn operate the storage battery switches which actuate the oil circuit breaker mechanism.

A special wave length, entirely outside the broadcasting range, is used and the series of impulses is as complex as the combination lock of a safe and in no way subject to extraneous influences. The tests which were just completed have demonstrated that the apparatus works with infallible accuracy.

Notwithstanding the massive nature of the apparatus which is controlled by this intricate system of relays, tests have shown that instead of dialing a number with the finger, the radio controlling apparatus is so sensitive that the oil circuit breakers could be actuated by the human voice, and that the modulation could be so arranged that the feat of All Baba in opening the cave by the word "Open Sesame" could be duplicated. It would be possible actually to adjust the apparatus so that the operator at Kokomo need only say the words, "Open, circuit breakers," and the breakers, 25 miles away would open.

COST OF OPERATING RAILROADS REDUCED $4,852,000 PER DAY

Was $16,991,000 in Sept. 1920. Cut to $12,139,000 in June, 1924.

CAUSES OF THE SAVING

"With the expiration of the guarantee, says the Railway Age, 'the cost of the guarantee made necessary by the government's wartime venture into the field of railroad management ceased to operate. Since then the Transportation Act, and regulation and private management of the railways under it, have been the subject of a vast amount of discussion. "Within the last four years, there have been great changes in volume of traffic, in wages, in total operating expenses, in rates and in earnings. What in a general way have been the results of these changes? This question can best be answered by comparing statistics for September, 1920, the first month after the large advance in rates went into effect, with statistics for June 1924, the latest month for which they are available. "The traffic of the railways in September, 1920, was substantially larger than, in June 1924. This partly accounts for the wide difference between the statistics for the two months. It only partly accounts for these differences, however. The reduction in the operating expenses of the railways due to reductions of wages and increases in the efficiency of management and the reductions in total earnings, which have been partly due to reductions of rates, have been far larger in proportion than the decline of traffic. "In September 1920, the large advance in wages, which was granted by the Railroad Labor Board in July of that year, was in full effect. The operating expenses of the Class I roads averaged $16,991,000 a day. In June, 1924, the operating expenses of these roads averaged only $12,139,000 a day. This was a reduction of $4,852,000 a day, as compared with September, 1920, and a reduction of $2,171,000 a day as compared with the last month of government operation. "Between December, 1917, a the end of which the government took over the operation of the railways, and February, 1920 at the end of which it returned them to their owners, the operating expenses of the Class I roads increased more than $6,200,000 a day. Within the last four years the railway management have not only wiped out all the increase in operating expenses that occurred after the railway operation and still had an excessive number of employees. "The increase in the number of employees accounted for $1,578,600 a day of the reduction of operating expenses. The remaining $1,566,000 a day of the reduction of expenses was due in other causes including, of course, the decline of traffic. "How much of this reduction of expenses has been passed along to the public in a reduction of the amount paid for railroad transportation? The total earnings derived by the railways from rates in September, 1920, were $26,631,660 a day, and in June, 1924, only $15,522,000 a day. A reduction of $11,109,660 a day. Furthermore, the railways in June 1924, paid $126,398 a day more in taxes than in September, 1920, which makes the total direct and indirect saving in the cost of transportation in the public more than $5,235,000 a day. "When the direct and indirect reduction in the cost of transportation to the public has been over $5,235,000 a day and the reduction of operating expenses $4,852,000 a day, it necessarily follows that the public saved in cost of transportation more than the amount saved in operating expenses. The net amount received by the railways from rates in September, 1920, averaged $2,655,000 a day, while in June, 1924, it averaged only $2,185,000 a day."

Famous Pleasure Spot of English Monarchs

Many things have done their part to make Hampton court what it is today, asserts a writer in John O'London's Weekly. Wolsey burns it all, and it is interesting to learn that when he walked in his park he liked to be left in his meditations. He would allow no servant to come near him; his order was that they should keep as far from him "as one might shoot an arrow." When Henry came into possession he at once extended the gardens, planted quickset hedges, and bought apple and pear saplings.
Elizabeth's reign as "most pleasant," adding that he "saw rosemary, so planted and called to the walls as to cover them entirely, which is a mother of exceedingly common in England."
Charles I. formed lakes. Charles II. planted more than two hundred elms and as many lime trees. William III.
in his turn, brought in the note of Dutch formality, with yew, box, and holly sculptured into bird and animal shapes or arranged to represent his royal initials; he formed rectilinear canals and did strange things with terrace and balcony, and fountains better designed (said Horace Walpole) "to vex the unwary than to refresh the peering spectator." Napoleonic, nearly everything he did was afterward undone.

HER FAVORITE DOG

"My wife wants a dog, but I forget the breed."
"Think it over, sir," suggested the salesman. "If you don't get the right breed she will be angry."
"Nobody knows that better than I do. I have it. It was a Windglon."
It was then the salesman's turn to study.
Finally he said: "I guess you want an Alroclia."

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Helping the Imagination.

One Mother Says:

After my children read a story that tells them they like to use it out. I encourage them in this idea because I believe that the imagination is stimulated by putting emotion into action. I put any clothes that will do for costumes into several old trunks stored in the attic and the children are free to rummage as they like as long as they put things back when they are through with them.

When May Huffsmith came to New York from Saylorsburg, Pa., she was going to prove to the world that she would be a great actress, and quickly. May was eighteen. When she found out that the great city is most cruel and that there are a great number of young women waiting to be great actresses, she swallowed poison. She will not die. She was sent home to Tom Frankensfeld, who says he will marry her.

The Word "Jovial"

The word "jovial" conceals the name of Jupiter, or Jove, according to the Washington Post. A "jovial" person is theoretically, at least, a person born under the influence of the planet Jupiter, or Jove.
The planet was supposed to be the most joyful of all the planets to be born under, just as Saturn is the least joyful.
Gradually the word "jovial" became dissociated from the astrological significance, and was generally applied to persons who indicated the quality of joyfulness ascribed to birth under a joyful planet.
Thus many a word in the English language in common use, traces its origin to remote beginnings and befalls in the darkness of the past ages.

Famous Ancient Tapestry

During the year 1748 a quantity of beautifully executed tapestry was discovered in the cathedral of Bayeux, near Caen, France. It is said to be of the eleventh century, the work of Matilda, wife of William the Conqueror, and ladies of her court. The tapestry, which is 214 feet long and 20 inches wide, contains 72 sections, each of which represents a scene in the life of the Saxon King Harold from the time of his visit to the Norman court to his tragic death in the battle of Hastings. In these scenes are 1,022 figures. In 1800 Napoleon, contemplating an early invasion of England, had the tapestry removed to Paris, where it was exhibited at the National museum. The following year it was returned to Bayeux.

Frisky Filly

Miss Sarah is "getting along in years," a fact she is unwilling to admit. She wears very youthful clothes; she has been described by a facetious neighbor as "sheep dressed lamb-fashion." And sometimes when the world pushes her into a niche where it thinks she belongs, Miss Sarah rebels.
One day she was talking merrily to a party of young girls. Her cheeks were pink and her little curls fluttering. She laughed a great deal.
"Oh, Miss Sarah," at last exclaimed one of the girls innocently, "how gay you must have been in those days!"
"Have been?" repeated the lady, indignantly. "Have been! Well, I'd have you know I'm not a contusion yet!"—Los Angeles Times.

Banker's Friends Elated

"Twelve years ago I became afflicted with stomach trouble which steadily became worse. I frequently became prostrated with colic attacks and vomiting. My doctor wanted to operate for gall stones. I wanted to avoid an operation and on advice of a friend tried May's Wonderful Remedy with excellent results as after taking it about 2 years ago my trouble has entirely disappeared." It removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at A. A. Clarke and druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

The Political Situation and Coal

Washington Correspondence of Chicago Black Diamond.

While coal legislation is expected to continue to stimulate at the coming session of Congress it may become a live issue when the new Congress comes into being after March 4, 1925. Whether or not it will then be brought to the front will depend upon the outcome of the presidential election and particularly on what happens in the various congressional elections.

At yet but little has been heard of the subject of coal legislation in the campaign. The Republicans are not particularly of the anthracite industry. The Democrats are not particularly of the bituminous industry. The Republicans contended themselves with urging legislation authorizing control of the distribution of coal in the event of a strike or other emergency as a means of preventing profiteering.

Probably Senator La Follette, the so-called independent presidential candidate, and other speakers in the half of the La Follette ticket will do more talking about coal legislation than will either of the old party candidates. La Follette, in his Labor Day radio speech, mentioned the coal industry as one of those controlled by monopolistic combines.

La Follette's Lamentable Coal. "When I say that the prices paid by the American people today for coal, food, light, clothing, and everything which goes to warm, house, feed and clothe the human family are fixed by great corporate combinations of wealth, I merely repeat what every intelligent man and woman within sound of my voice knows to be true." The Wisconsin senator said. "This power to fix prices, accompanied by the control of natural resources, of transportation and communication, has lodged in the hands of a relatively few men, a kind of power to amass enormous wealth by laying tribute upon the farmer, the wage-earner, and the consumer. This system tends to fix the labor of the farmer for his products. It fixes the price of the wage-earner's labor by fixing wages below the standard fixed by government experts to be necessary in order to maintain the family of the laborer in health and comfort. It tends to fix the price of the goods of the laborer by taking back in the form of extortionate profits much that rightfully belongs to wages and salaries and the profits of the firm.

"This system has become so deeply rooted in American life that the two great political parties which have shared control of the government since the Civil War now accept it as beyond the reach and control of the law. Under their administration, the system has extended its power until it is the life of the nation, and rules the very agencies of government which the people have set up to restrain it. It has not only been left free to oppress the farmer, the wage-earner, the press, the burner, the wage-earner, the consumer, but it has been permitted to employ the powers of the government itself to oppress upon the liberties, property and happiness of all.

"The 'progressives' have entered this campaign to contend that system which has already been indicted by public opinion. It is proper that we should come with a bill of particulars to our indictment. Really what to do we mean by the system?

"We mean the combination which rules the coal industry of this country; which fixes the price of coal to the consumer; which has baffled the Federal Trade Commission in its lawful effort to ascertain the facts regarding its profits and costs of production; and which under the last Democratic administration was aided by the department of justice in an attempt to crush the lawful organization of the miners in that industry.

La Follette then proceeded to summarize other combinations, including the sugar monopoly, the oil monopoly, the building combine, the meat packing combination. In referring to the Federal Trade Commission in making public the costs of production.

"As an aid in curbing the power of great monopoly interests to amass unjust profits at the expense of the public," said he, "we favor a reorganization of the Federal Trade Commission, and we would enlarge the powers and strengthen the laws, organic as well as statutory, under which they act, so that it might be necessary to ascertain and make public the costs of production and profits in oil and gasoline, coal, steel, and other basic industries.

Presumably re-election of President Coolidge will mean only moderate coal legislation, if any at all, while the election of Davis and the control of Congress by the Democrats might result in passage of some more far-reaching measures. Doubtless the activity of the La Follette-Whelan ticket might inconceivably mean coal legislation. If the election were thrown into the house and the house were unable to select a president and

Fourth Quarter Furnace Price Established $3.25 Clear 25-Cent Advance

Contracting Strike Broken But Volume of Business Is Rather Light.

SPOT FROM $3 TO $3.10

Region Losing Two Customers to By-Product Competitors; Demand for Spot Foundry Still Poor; Prices Stationary; More Heating Bought.

From The Weekly Courier.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 17.—What was said a week ago in The Courier report may be repeated this week, that while the coke market has not lost any ground it has failed to show expected improvement.

The common observation in the coke trade now is that ground is going to be gained more slowly than was expected a few weeks ago. Some well placed observers doubt whether there will be any really substantial improvement until after election. In all business circles, in fact, there is more talk of the election being a factor in restraining trade improvement than there was recently. It seems to be a case not of the election being more in doubt than formerly but of its previously having been thought that the doubts would be more or less resolved by this time.

Seeing what a protracted period there was of negotiation, the coke operators scored an important point recently in establishing $3.25 as the market on fourth quarter furnace coke contracts. Time after time furnaces had come into the market and on being met with the $3.25 quotation had withdrawn their inquiries, until finally a clear advance of 25 cents, as both July and third quarter contracts had been at $3.00.

It turns out now, however, that the victory of the operators is not doing them as much good as counted upon, the volume of business being so light. With the closing of a contract for the supplies for Dover furnace of the M. A. Hanna & Company, now reported as an accomplished fact, and involving about 14,000 tons a month over the quarter, at $3.25, the visible requirements seem to be leveling off. It is practically assured. Every phase of the safety movement will be discussed by 275 speakers and what has happened in safety during the past year will be the keynote of the meeting.

Two members of the President's cabinet, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and Secretary of Labor James J. Davis will speak at the congress. The story of progress will be related by many speakers of national and international prominence, will be shown vividly by exhibits, motion pictures and lantern slides and will be demonstrated in the daily sectional sessions and general sessions. Among the keynote speakers will be Morris Knowles, Pittsburgh Planning Commission; C. B. Abel, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company; Francis Feehan, safety commissioner, United States Bureau of Mines; and S. L. King, Jr., manager, Equitable Auto Company.

Some industrial features of the congress will be an extensive report of a study made by nationally known experts on the causes of benzol poisoning; a thorough report of research work into corrosion and its relations to safety in chemical plants; prevention of lead poisoning and health education of our foreign families. Industries are coming more and more to realize that the majority of accidents are due primarily to mental conditions of the individual and this attitude is reflected in the devotion of much time by the various sections of the council to the study of the mental causes of accidents.

Activity Along the M. R.
The mines along the Monacaheela railway in West Virginia are producing and shipping more coal than in any like period in the present coal year.

While the testimony of sales and prices leaves the spot furnace coke market in fairly good shape as formerly, there are some unfavorable aspects in the outlook, particularly the fact that the market seems to be losing two of its customers, for two furnaces that have been buying in the spot market at frequent intervals one is blowing out while the other has contracted for by-product coke made near the furnace. The furnaces referred to are at Dubois and Buffalo respectively.

Spot foundry coke has continued in particularly poor demand. The foundries do not seem to be operating at all well. In the pig iron circle it is remarked that while foundries have been quite moderate buyers of pig iron in the past couple of months, some of them do not seem to be molting the iron at the rate one would expect from the manner in which they bought. When they do not melt pig iron they do not need coke. The spot market remains quotable at $3.00 to $3.10, but it is noted that sales are centering much more on the $4.00 price, while $4.50 is being obtained only occasionally. It seems that buyers can secure better brands at $4.00 than they could a fortnight ago.

As mentioned in previous Courier reports, the $1.00 to $4.50 range is intended to cover the general run of the market not all the extreme cases. More than one special brand has been at above $4.50, and the price on one of these has just been reduced from $5.75 to $5.25. According to trade practice this will lead to a revision of such contracts as may have been made. The market in general is quotable unchanged as follows:

Spot furnace coke $3.00 to $3.10
Contract furnace coke $3.25
Spot foundry coke $1.00 to $1.50

Buying of heating coke has been increasing recently in the past few weeks and there is now a fair movement, though not a heavy one considering the time of year. Prices are quite fair relative to furnace coke, $2.90 being readily obtained for best

BY-PRODUCT OUTPUT RECOVERED SOME OF ITS LOSS IN AUGUST

Total Was 2,425,000, a Gain of 58,000 Net Tons, or 2.4 Per Cent.

68 PLANTS ACTIVE; 6 IDLE

After four months of steady decline the production of by-product coke recovered somewhat in August, as reported by the United States Geological Survey. The total output is estimated at 2,425,000 net tons, an increase over the revised figure for July of 58,000 tons, or 2.4 per cent. The improvement appears to have been due to increased activity at the iron and steel plants, where also operations had been greatly curtailed during the four preceding months. The present rate of output of by-product coke is now 22 per cent less than the average monthly rate in 1923, and about five per cent less than that of 1924.

The August output represented 64.1 per cent of capacity, and an average daily production of 78,237 tons. One new plant reported in August, bringing the total number of plants up to 74, of which 68 were active and six were idle. Of the total output, 70.3 per cent was produced at plants affiliated with companies engaged also in the manufacture of iron and steel.

There was no improvement at the beehive ovens and production declined to 424,000 tons, a decrease of seven per cent. The present monthly rate of output is less even than the average of 1921, and is barely a quarter more than the average weekly rate last year.

Excluding screenings and breeze the monthly average production for the seven years, 1917-1923, inclusive, and July and August, 1924, was as follows:

	By-Product	Beehive
1917	1,370,000	2,784,000
1918	1,160,000	2,510,000
1919	2,006,000	1,638,000
1920	2,005,000	1,748,000
1921	1,646,000	1,620,000
1922	3,878,000	214,000
1923	1,107,000	1,010,000
July, 1924	2,307,000	440,000
August, 1924	2,425,000	421,000

Three Old Mines Are Abandoned

The Adrian, Elmore and Holveth mines of the Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal & Iron Company in Indiana county have been closed down. At Elmore the company store stock has been removed and the building is being torn down for removal to a new mining town of the company. The company houses have been ordered vacated.

In Holveth the company store has been closed. Practically the same condition exists at Adrian. Company officials maintain that the mines in those locations are old operations and cannot be operated at anything but a loss under present production costs.

The Paramount

"THE PERFECT ALIBI" the feature picture today and tomorrow at the Paramount, presents Leo Maloney in the leading role. It is an exciting western drama of human conflict and animal intelligence. The scenes were taken on the actual locations of the story called for.

The Soisson

"UNDER TWO FLAGS" with Priscilla Dean in the leading role, provides interesting entertainment today at the Soisson.

Outstanding musical romance, "Under Two Flags" is probably the best known tragedy in the world. It first achieved fame as a work of fiction; then as a play with that remarkable actress Blanche Bates in the role of Elvira; and now Universal gives it to a long experienced public as a photoplay. The producing company is fortunate in having under contract the one star that could do full justice to the part; that is Priscilla Dean. Miss Dean is a never-ending surprise, each picture she makes seems to be the last word in histrionic ability, yet along comes the next just a trifle better. It is not such a difficult task selecting vehicles for such a star, because there are plenty of magnificent stories available when one has the ability to play the part.

James Kirkwood, a star in his own right, and Stuart Holmes, villain-drama of the screen, carry the burden of the support, and give flawless portrayals. Tribute must also be paid to William Fildow and his battery of cameramen for the remarkable shots. The one of a desert storm scene is immense.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday "The Yankee Consul" will be shown.

The Orpheum

"THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD"—On view today and tomorrow at the Orpheum, is a film adaptation from the famous stage play of George M. Cohan.

The footlight production was regarded by critics as one of the outstanding features of New York and the screen version of the play is said to be to the screen what the play was to the stage.

Bert Lytell enacts the title role, and this popular player is surrounded with a cast that is truly all-star in every essence of the word. Blanche Sweet appears opposite Lytell, and others of importance include Bryant Washburn, Mayron Aye, Helen Lynch, Victor Poole, Wade Crane, William Conklin, Frances Raymond, and Forrest Robinson.

The story of "the meanest man" deals with the struggles of a young lawyer who is so soft-hearted he finds himself a failure because he cannot say no to anyone. However, when he is assigned the duty of collecting a note from one J. Hudson, who resides in a little town in New York state. On his arrival he finds that J. Hudson is a girl and that she stands for Jane. In all towns there are the rich and the poor, and Jane is the rich one. She owns the mercantile store of the town, like "the meanest man," cannot say no to the poor customers. All that Jane possesses is her stock of goods and a piece of farm land.

The Arcade

A real treat is in store for patrons of the Arcade Theatre tonight when a real honest to goodness wedding will take place on the stage of the Arcade Theatre. The parties to be married are Walter Brown, who for the past two seasons has been the character man of Kinky Koo, and Louise Brant who joined the show about four months ago. To make a long story short, as Doc Paul, the principal comedian of the show puts it, in announcing the intentions of the couple, from the stage, they decided that two could live as cheaply as one, and so—well the result is the wedding from the stage of the Arcade Theatre tonight. Rev. G. G. Gallagher, of the Methodist Church, West Side, Connellsville, will officiate at the most unusual wedding which will take place immediately after the first performance at 9 P. M.

The management of the Arcade Theatre has arranged to give the couple a handsome gift, likewise the members of the performance will take place with the company of 18 people. Seen in "Thirty-to-One," a race horse story, exciting yet at all times funny. A number of good pictures will be shown.

"One Law For the Woman"

With Cullen Landis and Mildred Harris

Dear Sirs

Please Guard Your Hair.

By Edna Wallace Hopper.

I feel sorry to see men grow bald. It is easy to keep and to cultivate hair, and you owe it to yourselves and to us, for many years I have sought and discovered some of the world's greatest secrets. They all agree that hair health comes from a clean and healthy scalp. Comb the hardened oil and dandruff out of the hair roots. Tonic and stimulate the scalp. Then hair thrives, just as flowers thrive in a well-kept garden.

These experts have always supplied me the best helps known to science. Each new and better help discovered has come to me. I have had all of these combined in a product I call "My Hair Youth." I have placed it on drug and toilet counters at every woman's call. But men need it more than women, so this is written to urge men to learn how much it does.

I am no longer young. For 35 years I have been a success. But my hair today is thicker and finer than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff and never a touch of gray. Now I offer you in my "My Hair Youth" every hair which brought those results to me. I am well assured that they combine the greatest hair helps in existence.

My Hair Youth is sold everywhere today. It costs 50c and 1 per bottle.

Rich Fabrics and Beaded Novelties

French Women Approve Elaborate Materials; Also Chic Decorations.

Elaborate fabrics are generally receiving the favorable consideration of the beau monde at smart French resorts, says a Paris fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. At Deauville Gabrielle Chanel is showing a new tunic dress made of a velvet brocade on a mousseline background, the black and white being artistically merged. The material is such as to need no embellishment. Chanel uses it to make an almost full-length tunic under which is just visible a black lace petticoat.

The continuance of beaded effects is one of the surprising features at Le Touquet. Jenny is showing a half-dozen new models with bead embroidery. All are in tunic form over light and short foundation slips. These in white are often worn over black, and from one side is frequently suspended a brilliant splash of color in the form of plaited chiffon sash ends, beaded feather-trimmed panels or cascading flowers.

For autumn Jenny is developing some of these beaded models in velvet. This is an obvious effort to carry the beaded velvet dress over into another season. Its success, however, is still problematic. This designer has one lovely model in a soft beige crepe de chine inset with narrow bands of soft-toned chiffon. The crepe de chine shows an all-over beaded design, while the chiffon is plain. The whole is worn over a slip of coral pink satin which gives a rosy tone to the tan color and emphasizes the narrow chiffon panels. Underneath the tunic, which is only about three-quarters long, there is a flared skirt of chiffon over a foundation of pink satin. Jenny has developed this same model in a beige bathrobe with an all-over embroidery and incrustations of real lace, all dipped in tan color.

Formal affairs at Deauville indicate a continuance of ostrich as the most popular garniture for the dancing frock. The reason for this is patent. The trend toward vivid hues as a supplement to black-and-white has been particularly evident in the robes de soir, and the feather of the ostrich lends itself readily to the various color trends. Apparently no object can surpass a more translucent appearance than these feather fronds which have the unequalled ability to temper the garishness of the most brilliant shades.

Some of the early summer vogues are being furiously revived at Deauville, and the object is to ascertain whether or not they may be retained for the autumn and winter seasons.

Among Fall Styles for Well-Dressed Children

Beige broadcloth is used to build this handsome coat for a little miss. The beaver collar blends beautifully with the material, and the open back keeps the shoulders warm.

Latest Trifles for Girl With Abbreviated Locks

The demand for accessories that have to do with the hair or single is increasing fast and a number of engaging novelties intended to add to the comfort and appearance of the shorn head are constantly appearing. In order on every and all occasions are designed. Some, when need is urgent, completely cover the head, and even the wig is now quite usual. Caps of silk crepe, those narrow ribbons, put to other in lattice pattern are in popular demand, especially for motorcars, because they hold the hair in place and are much cooler than a solid covering or even one of net or chiffon. Some are charmingly becoming.

Among the latest trifles, apropos of the hair, is a little comb made especially for the taming of those waves that must needs be put in their place. Several times a day. The comb is fitted in a case of leather and may be easily carried in the purse.

Predicted for Fall

Naval blue and terra cotta is a delightful color combination which may be popular this fall. So far it is seen in some frocks, and hats.

The TRUANT SOUL
by VICTOR ROUSSEAU
Copyright by W.G. CHAPMAN

As she stood at her window Joan heard footsteps on the path below. Looking down, she saw the secretary leaving the house, carrying a suitcase. Her heart almost stood still. Surely Myers had not acknowledged defeat and taken Lancaster at his word? Surely he did not mean to go without another struggle?

She watched him cross the grass beside the chicken coop to where the weed-grown path joined the winding road. He was outside the grounds of the institute now, and he was still going in the direction of the station. He disappeared behind the hedge, appeared finally, a long way off and vanished again. He was gone, and she also seemed the sweeter, the day more serene.

Joan almost danced downstairs to the dining room. Lancaster was at the table waiting for her.

"Mr. Myers has gone away," she cried. "Doctor Lancaster, your will spirit has departed, suitcase and all."

Lancaster looked at her gravely. "I know," he said.

"Did he come to you? Did you charge him?"

"He did not come to me. He did not tell the mistress he was going. It looks bad."

"No," said Joan firmly, struggling against her conviction. "You will never see him again."

"You know what the Bible says about the unclean spirit who leaves a man, and returns with seven others, when he finds his home swept and furnished?"

"Doctor Lancaster, he has no hold on you. He can do nothing, and he will never dare to return."

"Well, my dear, we have a respite at all events," Lancaster answered. "So let us eat our breakfast and afterwards I'll take you for a walk through the woods, and we'll hold the fort together until evening."

Chapter VIII

By the next morning there was no doubt that victory had been won. There was color in Lancaster's face, a lightness in his step and best of all, he was psychically whole. The drug still clung to the nervous system of his physical domain, the hands still trembled the man started at sudden sounds, but the ability, further lying spirit had taken its departure.

Joan only discovered afterward what Lancaster must have endured. The treatment had been more heroic than Joan had known, and the antidotes which she administered, under Lancaster's own directions, were purposefully limited, for fear of supplanting one habit with another.

Lancaster had gone through the worst of his ordeal, and yet certain features of his illness were puzzling to both of them. The symptoms of morphine poisoning, elusiveness and prostration, were all there, but the case was as they felt, something of a classic. There was Lancaster's complete prostration on the morning when Joan discovered the nature of his illness. He told her afterward that he had been conscious all the time, but physically inert, as if paralyzed. That did not point to morphine poisoning, and a certain lethargy remained one of the last symptoms of the case.

Why Traveled for the Most Part in Silence

The intimacy of the sick room, born of their struggle had become the most natural thing to both of them. The passing of Myers had wrought an extraordinary change in the atmosphere of the institute. And somehow the news of Lancaster's recovery had spread into the country people had hoped the institute but now two nuclei were brought their habits to Lancaster, and it was amazing and delightful to Joan to see the doctor's transformation, his joyfulness and tenderness toward the children.

"I'm using my respite," he said humbly. "I want to get well to face my harder battle."

"It is no respite," answered Joan. "You are free now Doctor Lancaster; it is only a habit of thought that holds you."

There ensued three wonderful days after the secretary's departure, always to remain clear in the girl's memory. They were three days of uninterrupted recovery. After the second no more morphine was given. The fight was won, there was no questioning that.

"I suppose you will have to return to Avonmouth soon," Joan suggested.

"Yes—soon," he said, and fell into a gloom, meditation from which she could not arouse him.

That afternoon a telephone message came from Thompson a hill village, fifteen miles distant. A farm-hand had been crushed by a falling tree; would Lancaster come at once and see if anything could be done for him?

"Would you like to come with me?" asked the doctor.

"If I can be of help."

"Of course you can—the greatest help I shall need you badly perhaps to administer an anesthetic," he answered.

Lancaster telephoned to Jenkins for the buggy, and half an hour later they were driving along the country road into the heart of the mountains. They traveled for the most part in silence; Lancaster's thoughts were occupied with his prospective case, and Joan was content to sit quietly at his side and watch the changing panorama of the land she loved and knew so well. The road ascended continuously until at last, when the sun was low down in the sky, they entered Thompson's tiny settlement in the very heart of the mountain peaks.

It was a serious case and the patient was already comatose. The tree had fallen across the chest crushing it, and driving a rib into a lung. An immediate operation offered the only hope and the doctor decided to perform it in the cabin.

Joan having bandaged the family and the neighbors administered the ether. She had never been greatly impressed by the legend of the skilled surgeon with the wonderful touch, her first operation at Avonmouth had seemed to her like a sort of guided plumbing and the leisurely manner of the surgeon had reduced the art to a science. In her estimation, she she resented for opinion as, seated at the patient's head, she watched Lancaster working within a compass of fraction of an inch where a slip would have been deadly. His fingers which had trembled as he held the retractor, were as steady as the steel instruments he used. His decision and precision were amazing, and when at last the operation was ended and the patient's recovery announced as probable, she could not conceal her enthusiasm.

They were to remain at the cabin overnight in case of a change for the worse returning to the institute in the morning. After a scrappy meal they had wandered to the end of the village toward a patch of woodland that was encroaching on the far settlement. The long summer twilight still held the land although the mountain tops were already vague and shadowy. They stood there looking down toward the level country under them. "I think you are the most wonderful surgeon in the world," said Joan. "And you see I didn't faint this time," she added.

"I don't. Why should you faint?" asked Lancaster, looking at her with a puzzled expression.

"You seemed to regard my weakness in the operating room as a sign of my incapacity," she replied a little chagrined that he should have dismissed the matter from his mind. Lancaster looked at her with that strange glance which seemed always designed to hide his thoughts. Then his face softened.

"Do you know that I owe you everything on earth to you—to you, my dear?" he asked.

And he took her in his arms and kissed her.

"That's what you mean to me," he said. "I can't lose you. I want you to fill the life that has been given back to me."

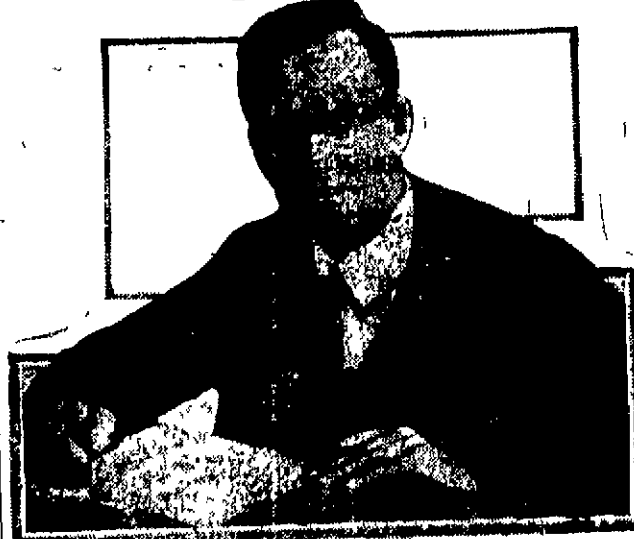

And at the touch of his lips on hers Joan knew that in truth she loved him, all that she had heard of the man's past, his disolute life, the talk of Avonmouth was forgotten. She only knew that she loved him not with the wild passion of which she had heard but with a quiet and abiding fondness, none the weaker for its qualities of calmness and it was the most natural thing in the world that she who had given him life again should give her own life also to this wonderful strong man who had risen above his wrongs and driven the besetting devils from him by vigorous strength. Her heart was lifted up, serene and trustful she returned his kiss.

"I love you too," she answered. "Nothing of the past shall ever come between us."

They were at the verge of the forest, upon a height that overlooked Mithrie and Lancaster's hill villages, but now outspread in the shadowy plain beneath them. A dozen counties could be dimly discerned from that spot by daylight. Far in the distance were the coastal lands nearer the cultivated belt nearer still the little farms, and the matchless mountains all about them. It was their home that the small of the rich soil was in their nostrils, and in their hearts the sense of home.

Americans Lead Fight Against Appalling Misery As Millions Exchange Homes In Near East

Boynas Hero Who Leads Near East Relief Work Among Deported

ALLEViating the misery of two million people, torn from their homes and forcibly moved to distant lands where customs, languages and surroundings are strange and confusing to them, is the task confronting American workers of the Near East Relief in the Balkans to-day.

Primarily the situation was brought about by the flight of more than a million Greeks from Europe following the Smyrna disaster. The thousands of populations agreement written into the Lausanne treaty was before the refugee crisis, it increased the numbers involved by almost one hundred per cent, and half of them, Armenians, Greeks, the Greek Islands and Macedonia, the rest being the remaining Greeks in Turkey.

Theoretically the situation is handled by a high commission and eleven sub-commissions headed by neutrals with Greek and Turkish members.

Actually much of the work has fallen on the Americans who were specifically requested by the High Commission to handle the Greek refugees. The sub-commissions could function at that time. Greece was overrun with refugees, who were dying in the streets by the hundreds and whose rehabilitation in Greece depended on nothing but the property occupied by the Greeks. With the consent of both the Turkish and Greek governments the transfer was placed under the direction of H. C. Jaquith, who directed Near East Relief for a decade before the Smyrna disaster and whose efforts during four years as treasurer of American relief work among the Greek refugees had demonstrated his impartiality and fitness for the task.

One of the chief problems in connection with the onerous migration has been that of child welfare. With the Moslems going to Turkey, the question has not been acute. The high death rate among the Greek refugees, the unsanitary conditions in which they were forced to live, the loss of their homes and the hardship on their wives, and the hardship on the children, have been the chief problems. The Near East Relief has been the chief benefactor of the Greek children. An effort has been made to care for as many as possible in the Greek Islands, orphanages of the Near East Relief in which these are already 1,000 children. But resources are so limited that only a small fraction are receiving care. The remainder constitute a tremendous problem for the coming year.

Now is the problem to be met. Mr. Jaquith and his associates are working in the knowledge that it can be met with their present budget, but they have one hope. This is that the observance of International Golden Week Sunday on December 10th, the day of the League of Nations, will prove fruitful propaganda for raising the necessary funds.

Gibbet Superseded Cross

Ornification is a method of punishing criminals remained in force throughout the Roman empire until the early part of the fourth century. The Test

The loftiest test of friendship—unquestioned as companionship—is the power to do without it. And in this world of external confusions and separations there is often such need. We do not yield the friendship, but must forego the proof of our capacity for sacrifice our loyalty to the highest of all. We turn our faces from each other but never our hearts, and wait our opposite ways. Our hearts are the heavens wide and deep above us, and we ourselves breathing new, yet strangely familiar atmospheres, yet with the breath of the old infection we see ourselves—each sees the other—met once more in a presence which has never forsaken us—my Larcum.
